Please beware of large volume access using pre-read browser functions

Accessing large volumes of data over short periods of time during use of electronic databases, journals and e-books may be regarded as a breach of contract and thus result in suspension of access to such services for The University of Tokyo as a whole by their providers.

There have been frequent recent occurrences of users unintentionally downloading or accessing large volumes of data using pre-read browser functions. Pre-read browser functions continually access links within pages in the background while pages are being viewed. As a result of this, large volume data download or large volume access of which the user is unaware may occur, even if the user intends to use electronic journals in the standard way. We request your cooperation in disabling these functions in browser settings. Be aware that there have been many reports of this happening with Microsoft Edge in particular.

Nutritional considerations in project planning: A case study of assessment methods
John Mason, Marito Garcia, Janice Mitchell, Karen Test, ... Hamid Tabatabai
Pages 109-122

You could get the articles by following the steps above.

Please try the above procedure especially in the following case.

When you know that there is the full text of an article, you know that there is the full text of an article, but you are asked to log in again on the publisher site, try the above procedure.

Example:

[1] When you search TREE and click the search result.

The screenshot shows the 'U Tokyo Resource Explorer' search interface. The search query is 'Nutrition work in socioeconomic development agencies'. The results are sorted by relevance. The first result is a journal article titled 'Nutrition work in socioeconomic development agencies' by Meissner, Frank, published in 'Food Policy' (1985, Volume 10, Issue 2). The abstract text is visible: 'Since the early 1980s nutritional levels have deteriorated in Latin America. The multilateral development agencies are stepping up their attempts...'. A red box highlights the 'Full Text Online' link under the article title. The left sidebar shows search refinement options like 'Full Text Online', 'Scholarly & Peer-Review', and 'Library Catalog'.

[2] You will move the Publisher's site. And you click "Get Access."

[3] If you are asked to log in again on the publisher site, try the above procedure. (Please see page 1.)
